DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-6, drawn to a method for evaluating an effect of an agent tested on the skin of a transgenic mouse, classified in class 800, subclass 3.
- II. Claims 7-9, drawn to an agent for preventing or treating dermatitis and/or alopecia, classified in class 424, subclass 130.1.
- III. Claims 10 & 11, drawn to an IL-18 transgenic mouse, classified in class 800, subclass 18.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions I and II are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the agent of group II can be used for another materially different process from the method of group I for evaluating an effect of an agent tested on the skin of a transgenic mouse, such as in a pharmaceutical composition for therapeutic treatment of dermatitis and/or alopecia. Further, the method of group I can also be practiced with another type of agent, such as nicotine patches, hormone patches or other transdermal drugs to be tested for adverse inflammatory reactions.

Inventions II and III are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case the different inventions are distinct in that group II is to an agent for preventing or treating dermatitis and/or alopecia and group II is to an IL-18 transgenic mouse. An agent for preventing or treating dermatitis and/or alopecia is fundamentally different in structure and function from an IL-18 transgenic mouse. Further, an agent for preventing or treating dermatitis and/or alopecia is not required for the manufacture or use of an IL-18 transgenic mouse. An IL-18 transgenic mouse can be used in manifestly different ways than said agent, such as a model of patterns of IL-18 expression within the developing mouse or as snake food.

Inventions I and III are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the transgenic mouse of group II can be used for another materially different process from the method for evaluating an effect of an agent tested on the skin of a transgenic mouse, such as a model of patterns of IL-18 expression within the developing mouse.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.
